Guild®

ALL-SEASON APPAREL

from the makers of Guild Guitars

The year was 1952, the place Manhattan. Al Dronge, a music store owner and former professional guitarist, along with George Mann, a well-known guitar manufacturer, formed a partnership and registered the Guild Guitar Company on October 24th. From a small loft in New York City, Guild has grown through the years; the present facility in Westerly, Rhode Island, has been Guild's home since 1967.

Throughout its entire history, Guild has dedicated itself to producing the finest value in American-made guitars and continues to maintain and improve upon the high standards set by founder Al Dronge. Forty-five years after its inception, the Guild Guitar name is known for quality and exceptional value.

The clothing in this brochure celebrates the Guild tradition of fine, American-made musical instruments. Whether you are a luthier, player, or simply a lover of music, you'll be proud to wear the Guild shield.
